Blackdog Resources Ltd. Initiates Light Oil Production and Development Program at Woking

Blackdog Resources Ltd. ("Blackdog" or "The Company") (TSX Venture Exchange: DOG) is pleased to announce the commencement of a light oil development program on the Company's property at Woking, Alberta located approximately 60km north of Grande Prairie. The Woking property consists of 8840 gross acres (3600 net to Blackdog), including working interests in 13 standing wells and/or abandoned wellbores.

Since closing the Woking acquisition on June 1, 2009, the Company has completed an extensive financial, geological and operational assessment of the property. The potential exists for the Company to develop this property into a several hundred barrel per day ("bopd") producing light oil property. The Company believes that it has now developed a comprehensive well-plan to achieve these production goals with attractive operating netbacks.

After an extensive technical review and consultation with all related local parties in the Woking area, the Company has applied to the Energy Resource Conservation Board ("ERCB") to re-enter an abandoned well for conversion into an Enhanced Oil Recovery ("EOR")/Salt Water Disposal ("SWD") well. This will cut trucking costs on the property by over 90 per cent and eliminate water disposal costs entirely. Previously, the water had been trucked almost 100 km one way and disposed using a third party's facility. The water drive from our planned new disposal well is expected to enhance and increase the amount of light oil recoverable from the Halfway oil pool within the Company's Woking property. Other Halfway oil pools in the area with similar types of water injection systems have seen their recovery increase by 30 to 50%. Two independent studies have determined the amount of Original Oil in Place ("OOIP") is approximately 10 million barrels. Prior to Blackdog's acquisition of the property, only approximately 500,000 barrels (or 5%) of the oil had been recovered. Blackdog believes the potential exists to recover in excess of 1,000,000 additional barrels of light oil.

The Company intends to initiate production from between 8-11 wells before the end of 2009. The first of these wells (6-21-75-4) was recently reworked and put on line on September 8, 2009 with a low water cut. The Company has a 58% Working Interest ("W.I.") in this well which is already contributing significantly to the cash flow of the Company.

The Company expects to be making ongoing announcements as it aggressively proceeds with its Woking Development Plan over the coming months.

Blackdog is a junior oil and gas company with a focus on light oil production in Alberta and South East Saskatchewan. The Company currently has 16,732,447 shares outstanding.
